Nationally Recognised Training

Australia has a system of national standardisation of training for many industry areas including Information Technology. This system is implemented through the use of training packages (groups of courses) and individual units of competency.

All units studied in this course are nationally recognised competencies from the Information & Communications Technology Training Package.

1. Aims

To develop knowledge and skills in the use of Information and Communications Technology (ICT)

This course gets students inside the ICT - no longer are they users. This course provides the hands-on technical foundation for a range of IT Diploma courses.

This course also suits ICT graduates who want to improve their practical skills in the PC and server area, and those with practical skills who want to gain a formal Australian qualification in IT.

2. Course Outcomes

This course in ICT provides students with the necessary skills for the following purposes:

- To undertake work as an ICT technician:
- To undertake work in a range of ICT support roles (e.g. user, operations, PC, technical and/or client)
- To facilitate access to employment, including setting up a small business
- As a precursor to higher level studies.

3. Overview

This qualification is fully competency-based. The course involves highly practical, hands-on approaches and delivery. It utilises a wide range of teaching-learning methods including extensive workshop experience to consolidate skills learnt. This is an active learning course for small groups.

4. Duration

The Certificate III course is studied over a semester which involves two 10 week periods of formal tuition as well as a mid-semester break.

There are 2 intakes for the Certificate III course: in February and July.
